bethel town office

The Town Office and Landfill will be closed Monday, May 31, in observance of Memorial Day. The spring breezes are carrying more and more sounds of tapping hammers, chugging bulldozers, and the whine of power saws. When we investigate, we often find a neighbor or fivend constructing a new home, positioning a mobile home, relocating or altering an existing dwelling or, perhaps, adding a new swimming pool. Being human, thoughts of what kind of threat this new "thing" poses flash in our minds, Will it block my view or change my property value? Does the new "thing" extend over the property line? If the "thing" really is a problem, what procedures are there to redress

For the past two years, the Bethel Planning Board has been wrestling with these and similar questions. After final honing during the next few weeks, the re-sults of this work will be contained in a proposed building ordinance that will seek to establish minimum construction standards for new construction, alterations, additions, relocation and replacement of buildings. Specific details are not presently available. However, information in the following continued on Page Eight continued from Page One paragraphs is offered to assist in ormulating constructive review of the proposed ordinance when pub-lic hearings are scheduled.

The primary purpose of town planning in the United States has been to prevent the negative con-sequences of unrestricted land development, and to introduce positive practices benefithing the "health, safety and welfare" of our inhabitants. Building codes, health regulations, subdivision control, and zoning have been the chief instruments to this end. Recently, environmental legislation has greatly extended the range of consideration and regulation,

The school of thought that holds that complete lack of restrictions benefits the individual arrives the public interest, as it has evolved and been translated into law over the years, is not supported by the lessons of history. With few exceptions, the need for govern-mentally imposed limitations and requirements is recognized since minimum standards reduce selfdestructive competition and support a positive image of individual landowner/developer in the public

On the other hand, complaint of many citizens today is that government rules, regulations and requirements have expanded far beyound those necessary for the proper functioning of the town and the environment desired by its citizens. They believe restrictions have become so excessive that they are self-defeating; preventing improvements and needed development by making efficient project management almost impossible and adding greatly to costs. Regulatory delay, or time taken, to obtain various approvals for a proposed project is probably the "original sin". Proliferating con-ditions that the individual must meet before being granted a certificate of occupancy exacerbates the situation. Because law enforcement depends in general on voluntary compliance, enforcement of codes becomes impractical and compliance is reduced correspon-dingly as laws and regulations multiply and become more complex. Confronted with a maze of regulations, the individual property owner is often too considered or discouraged to proceed with a

Obviously, the solution to the problem will lie in adopting for Bethel a moderate ordinance that avoids excesses and extremes. Approval procedures, implicit policies, underlying assumptions, and the appropriateness and legality of actions contained in the ordinance must then be examined to determine whether each one is reasonable. Finally, to avoid pitfalls of unrealistic and out-of-date plans, the provisions should exist in the ordinance to periodically review, explain and confirm its contents and effects. Your consideration of the forthcoming proposed ordinance will ensure that a constructive, cooperative balarice between the rules and regulations and private enterprise will be achieved.
